Aaron, your birthday was this weekend. In the the short time that we had together, our entire lives changed. They continued to change. Not a day goes by, I don't think on you or the man and the friend I lost. I will never have that again, but I'm grateful. I miss you.

Aaron - I learned of your passing last night...I'm heart broken - but I so hope you have finally found the peace and love you were looking for. I'll miss you and never forget your light and what we shared.

I haven't chatted with Aaron for a long time. The last time I spoke to him over Messenger, he was walking as an IT personnel, if I remember correctly, and he seemed to be getting along fine with his life, although perhaps a little bored with his work. It is a shock to learn about his death, and especially the way he chose to leave this world. He was a smart and witty guy who had so much to give. He'll be missed.

We hadn't spoken in years, but when we were close, it was wonderful. I knew him in college. We spoke of moving to Italy to live in a Villa; I would have a closet of Manolo's and we would have our own wings, and meet over brunch to discuss our exploits. He was witty, intelligent, handsome, and just a delight to be around. He had a flare and artistry for life that was admirable, and in so many ways lived life in ways I truly admire. I missed the chance to tell him how fondly I remembered our times together, and how indelibly his memory is stamped on my heart. That I never quite relinquished the dream/idea of moving to Italy with him...even if it was an unrealistic one, it was a fun dream. It saddens me that I will never get to show him this beautiful 'Big Apple' city I call home, and that I didn't see him the last time I was in Oregon. I know he had many friends who are just as heartbroken as I that he is no longer here, and I am sorry that I cannot be there in person to commemorate his life. So, dear Aaron Alan Renner, you delightful, wonderful, intelligent, fabulous man: I would not trade having known you for the world. I pray you find peace, and I do so hope you know how very loved you are. ~Tali
